

Unaccompanied Minors Policy USA

Some airlines have very strict policies regarding who they consider too young to fly alone. United and American Airlines will NOT accept minors if they are taking a connecting flight and travelling without an adult. On every American air carrier, children need to be at least 15 years old to fly as unaccompanied minors. Delta is the only airline that will allow a minor a connection as long as it is on a code share flight.

Students between the age of 5 and 14 may travel on these airlines as long as they follow the prescribed rules and pay a $150 (USD) fee to the airline for an unaccompanied minor service.

In addition, PLUS will need to schedule a staff member to wait with them at the airport and then transfer that staff member back home, meaning an additional fee will be incurred on top of the airline fee.

See full United Airlines terms and conditions at:

<https://www.united.com/web/en-US/content/travel/specialneeds/minors/default.aspx>

See full American Airlines terms and conditions at:

<https://www.aa.com/i18n/travel-info/special-assistance/unaccompanied-minors.jsp>

See Delta Airlines full terms and conditions at:

<https://pro.delta.com/content/agency/us/en/products-and-services/special-services/unaccompanied-minor--umnr--service.html>